

Plymouth College of Art are proud to present

---

‘I’m a Creative, What next?’

---

series will run from

Monday 24 to Thursday 27 March, with nine different online seminars on offer in total.

Run by Enterprise, Employability and Entrepreneurship lecturer Karin Jordan, the webinars will include expert advice on how to protect your creative ideas, how to stand out from a crowd and market yourself in a competitive environment, how to seek crowd-funding from creative projects - and more!

---

The webinar speakers range from fashion marketing lecturer, designer and consultant Richie Manu, Gill Nicol of Lights Going On, Michelmores IP solicitor David Thompson, Illustrator Tristan Manco and others.

Karin said “This series is part of our approach to establishing aspirational learning environments that encourage the development of creativity and innovation together with business acumen. We want to ensure that our students have the opportunity to develop the skills and dispositions to apply their creativity in the workplace and to adapt to changing circumstances”

Each online seminar is just £5, with a £30 special offer for access to all of the nine different webinars in the series.

Organisations and other educational institutions wishing to book group price tickets can contact us for a special offer quote.

Book online here

and find out more information at makemeacreative.com

Plymouth College of Art